

Had 658 Votes on the Roll Call When Nevada, West Virginia and Idaho Switched, Giving Him the 667 Necessary for the Nomination.

(BY MARTIN GREEN.)
(Special to The Evening World.)

The names of eight men were submitted to the convention in speeches ranging from brilliant to stupid. Only once during the proceedings did Tammany Hall utter a peep and that occasion was unimportant.

The convention after making the nomination adjourned until 2 P. M., when the man to fill the second place on the ticket will be named.

On the roll call of States following the nominating speeches it was seen when the roll had finished that Judge Parker had received 658 votes, or nine less than enough to nominate him, or two-thirds of the convention.

VOTE MADE UNANIMOUS.

Before the vote was announced, amid the greatest excitement, Idaho changed her six votes from Hearst to Parker, and this left him three less than enough. Several delegates were on the floor anxious to be recognized.

Men were clamoring for recognition from the Chair, and about the Parker camp there was cheering, as it was seen that the end had come and the months of hard work for the candidate had not been in vain.

The lucky State to make the change and thus nominate the candidate was West Virginia. The Chairman got the eye of the Chair and shouted the change of their votes from Hearst and Gorman to Parker. This gave the necessary two-thirds, and before the votes could be figured Washington changed from Hearst to Parker, and Champ Clark, of Missouri, who had nominated Cockrell, made the motion to make it unanimous.

BIG CROWD SANG "AMERICA."

The motion was followed by the greatest enthusiasm, and the scenes of the wildest joy among the New Yorkers and their friends who had gathered to congratulate the New York leaders.

A monster American flag was unfurled, and while the crowd was still cheering and the galleries that had waited all night for the nomination were singing "America" that the band had struck up, Patrick Collins, of Boston, mounted the platform to second the motion to make it unanimous.

The leaders of various hoods were the first to shout for the candidate, and what soreness there had been over the preliminary struggle was over. The convention hall in a few minutes became a mingled mass of delegates. There was the usual cheering that lasted for several minutes, but the cheering crowd had spent itself. Days and nights without sleep, the all-night session, all had told on the crowd, and while the enthusiasm was great, it was short-lived.

It soon took the expression of congratulations, and men were laughing and crawling over seats to get to various men who had been great before the convention.

Martin W. Littleton was congratulated a hundred times. David B. Hill, Sheehan and McCarren were hit on the back and slapped by others, while their hands were wrung by those in front of them.

GREAT JOY OF DEMOCRATS.

Up-State delegates hit Charles F. Murphy on the back and said, "Now, Murphy, be good."

A procession was started about the hall, but it went to pieces when the crowd reached New York. The crowd got Hill and tried to put him on a chair. He was laughing and crying alternately.

Hill, asked for a statement, said:
HILL IS A HAPPY MAN.

"Of course I am delighted at the result, and the more so because of two facts--first that Judge Parker was named on the first ballot, and second because with one exception no personal abuse or vituperation was indulged in. Each State was allowed to put in nomination her favorite son and vote for him, as we had planned. Judge Parker will, I believe, make an ideal candidate and will fit the platform, which is also ideal."

Mr. Bryan left the convention hall a few minutes before the nomination was made unanimous, but not before he knew that Judge Parker was nominated. To several correspondents who were waiting for him he said he had nothing to add to what he had said in the convention, which was that he would support any candidate named on the platform he had made.

"The clerk called 'Wisconsin' it was the signal for Mr. Bryan to rise. Representative Nabors had visited to Wisconsin and

Chicago that was must settle the destinies of nations; that peace is but a dream; that women pray for it; that men may prophesy about it; that all these talks of orderly tribunals and all this, are but empty sounds; if he believes these things he is a dangerous man for our country and the world. (Prolonged cheering and applause.)

"I believe he ought to be defeated, I believe he can be defeated, and if the Democratic party does what it ought to do I believe he will be defeated."

"How can you defeat him? I tried to defeat the Republican party as your candidate. I failed, you say? Yes, I did."

"I received a million more votes than any Democrat had ever received before, and yet I failed. Why did I fail? Because there were some who had affiliated with the Democratic party who thought my election dangerous to the country, and they left and helped to elect my opponent. That is why I failed. I have no word of criticism for them. (Applause.) I have always believed, I believe tonight, I shall always believe, I hope, that a man's duty to his country is higher than his duty to his party. I hope it will always be true that men of all parties will have the moral courage to leave their parties when they believe that to stay with their parties will be to injure their country. The success of your government depends on the independence and the moral courage of its citizenship."

"We came here and agreed upon a platform. We followed your instructions. I would not if I could have prevented it permitted us to disregard your instructions. (Applause.) I believe in the right of the people to elect their delegates, and when a delegate is instructed it is binding upon him. But, my friends, not a majority came instructed for any candidate. That means that you were left upon your responsibility to select a candidate, and a grave responsibility it is. Grave is the responsibility resting upon these delegates in this convention. I have not come to ask anything of this convention. Nebraska asks nothing but to be permitted to fight the battles of Democracy. (Cheers.)"

The Right to Suggest.

"Some of you have called me a dictator. It was false. You know it was false. (Cheers.) How have I tried to dictate? I have suggested that I thought certain things ought to be done. Have not you exercised the same privilege? Why have I not a right to suggest? (Applause.) A voice: "You have." Because I was your candidate, am I now stopped from even making suggestions? (Cries of "No! No!")

"Why, sir, if that condition went with a nomination for the Presidency, no man worthy to be President would ever accept a nomination (applause), for the right of a man to have an opinion and to express it is more important and sacred than the holding of any office however high."

Still Has His Opinions.

"I have my opinions about the platform. I made my suggestions. Not all of them were taken. I would like to have seen the Kansas City platform reaffirmed. (Applause.) I am not ashamed of that platform. I believe in it now as I believed in it when I was running upon it. Then I was your candidate, but the people in the Democratic party did not agree with me, and their will was supreme. When they vote my suggestions I have to accept. This is no other objection I can appeal to. I have not attempted to dictate about candidates."

"I have not asked the Democrats of this nation to nominate any particular man. I have said that there were many men, I have said that I would like to see every State willing to be President and I have said that I would like to see every man who voted for me in both campaigns we ought to be able to find at least one good man for President. (Long applause.)"

Suggestions Are General.

"I have made these suggestions only in a general way. I am here tonight as a delegate from Nebraska. I have no confidence enough in my own opinion to tell you that I can pick out the man and say that this man must be nominated or we shall lose. I have not nominated or recommended any man, and stand by them if I believed them right than to accept anybody else's if I believed them wrong. I cannot apologize for my cheerings. Now, give up. I have said all I have to say."

thus took the place of that state in the roll call. Mr. Bryan asked for unanimous consent for a suspension of the time limit on seconding speeches. It was granted, and he opened his talk in voices so weak that it would be scarcely recognized as his.

It was then a few minutes after 4 o'clock. Out through the windows of the Coliseum the light of early dawn was tingling the dingy buildings roundabout. But there were few vacant seats. Men and women had been waiting in heat and discomfort for something real, and the occasion for which they had suffered inconvenience was at hand.

Had Perfect Control.

Bryan's control of the immense audience was absolute. A wave of his hand killed the applause. His cleverness as an orator was illustrated in a dozen ways. At times the interested thousands hung breathless on his words, believing that he would declare for Parker. In another moment he would manage to convey the impression that he was going to ask for the nomination himself. When he commended Hearst the halfhearted Hearst boomers went wild. Many of the enthusiasts began to offer to bet money that Hearst would control enough votes on the first ballot to prevent the nomination of Parker.

Spoke for Forty Minutes.

Bryan spoke for forty minutes. His concluding declaration of faith in the ability of Democracy to win gave rise to another of the numerous hysterical screams that have seized this convention. His one lasted close to ten minutes. Given after he had concluded there was no exodus from the hall. With broad daylight showing through the windows fully two-thirds of the crowd that had poured through the Coliseum entrances last night was hanging on. Here and there a sleeper lolled in a chair, but the sleepers were few. For a crowd that had been up all night it was a comparatively fresh-looking gathering.

His declaration that had he fought the fight he might have finished his course, but that nobody could deny that he had kept his faith, was greeted with cheers and cries, "You did!" and "That's so!" As he proceeded the great hall became stiller. It was as silent as a church and the thousands who filled it hung on his every word.

Great Tribute to Bryan.

No such tribute had been paid any man of all those who have spoken since the Democratic convention was called to order last Wednesday morning.

Mr. Bryan said: "Two nights without sleep, and a cold make it difficult for me to make myself heard. I trust that it will be easier in a moment, but as I desire to speak to the delegates later than to the visitors, I hope that they at least can hear."

"Eight years ago a Democratic convention placed in my hands the standard of the party and gave me the commission as its candidate. Four years later that commission was renewed. I come tonight to the Democratic convention to return the commission and to say that you may dispute whether I fought good fight, you may dispute whether I finished my course, but you cannot deny that I have kept the faith. (Cheers.)" prayed for, of perpetual peace will never come, thus substituting the doctrine of brute force and giving denial to the hopes of the race. And this President, a candidate for re-election, is presented as the embodiment of that ideal, the granite and the iron, to represent the new idea of militarism. Do you say you want to defeat the military idea? Friends of the South, are you trying to defeat the military idea? Let me tell you that not one of you, North, East or South, more fears the triumph of that idea than I do. If this is the doctrine that our nation is to stand for, it is retrogression, not progression; it is the lowering of the ideals of the nation; it is the turning backward to the ages of force. More than that, it is a challenge to the Christian civilization of the world and nothing less. (Loud applause.)

A Prophet of Peace.

"Twenty-seven hundred years ago a prophet foretold the coming of one who was to be called the Prince of Peace. Two thousand years ago He came upon the earth and the song that was sung at his birth was 'Peace on earth, good will toward men.' (Loud cheering and applause.)

"For two thousand years this doctrine of peace has been growing. It has been taking hold upon the hearts of men. For this doctrine of peace millions have given their lives. For this doctrine of peace thousands have crossed oceans and given their lives among savage tribes and among for-

DERBY, Conn., July 4.—The news of Judge Parker's nomination was taken to-day to Mrs. Parker, the mother of the Democratic nominee. Tears welled to her eyes, and for a moment she could not speak. Then in a trembling voice she said:

"I had hoped, if his nomination would be the best thing for the party, that he would be nominated, and now," she said, "if his election will be the best thing for the country, I sincerely hope that he will be elected."

She said that Judge Parker was a personal friend of President Roosevelt, and within a year or two had made him a visit at his summer home, at Oyster Bay.

Mrs. Parker is eighty years old, and lives here with her daughter, Mrs. Hall. She expects to spend the latter part of the summer with her son at his summer home, in Beacon, N. Y.
